

For immediate release - February 22, 2010

YEA Believes "Entrepreneurship is the Birthright of American Youth"

Columbus, OH - It has been widely reported that education is short-changing our students and the dropout rate is insurmountable. In a time of great challenge, a group is emerging with some promising opportunities to make a difference. Let us tell you what entrepreneurship education is doing nationwide to keep America's students in school and prepare them for work after they graduate.

The Youth Entrepreneurship Alliance, launched during National Entrepreneurship Week Feb 20 - 27, 2010, is a newly formed team of national organizations that want to show you how educational experiences with entrepreneurship enable students to expand their vision, see personal opportunities, develop skills, and have the courage to pursue their dreams. No matter what type of school or level of education provides entrepreneurial experiences, students can gain a sense of self-reliance and a thirst for learning more about how to be a successful entrepreneur.

The Youth Entrepreneurship Alliance (YEA) is intent on making waves throughout the nation to ensure that more students have entrepreneurial education experience than ever before. They have come together as leading organizations in their fields to jointly provide leadership for the youth entrepreneurship movement. To learn more about the members and their initiatives go to www.YEAladers.org

Let's talk about empowering today's youth on FaceBook - Join us at Youth Entrepreneurship Alliance.

Be part of Celebrating National Entrepreneurship Week Feb 20 - 27, 2010 www.nationalEweek.org

For information contact: Cathy Ashmore, cashmore@entre-ed.org or 614-486-6538.

###